IN MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory

Ethel M. Barnett

I'm waking up with a smile because I know all the while no more sorrow, no more tears laughter ringing in my ears

I've got a feeling of love and joy like unto the gift of a toy in my heart, your memory is here to stay

it sways with the breezes through the day

I see you Mother dear, clearer now my love of God dearer, somehow beside the trodden road you stand that leads to that far and distant land

You wait and meet the falling rain on your face, it leaves no stain You lift your head to a rising sun and then rest, when the day is done

A burning tear falls upon my cheek

in sadness, not a word can I speak

For a moment, I was overcome with awe with the traits of human law

Amidst the vast and peaceful sky came the puzzled question:

Why?

The time of death is unmistakable because the call of time is not forsaken

Burnish for shadow, laughter for tears

Singing for sighing, courage for fears

Gladness for sadness, gifts from above wonder memory! the magic power of love!

If U. S. industries are to compete with their Canadian counterparts, then the federal government must take steps to alleviate inequities in the two countries' trade practices.

That was the crux of testimony I submitted recently to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, whose Oversight of Government Management subcommittee is holding hearings on U. S. Canadian trade policies. The subcommittee, chaired by Senator Bill Cohen, is seeking answers to the problems that have emerged from the differing trade philosophies espoused by the United States and Canada.

Basic underlying philosophical differences in the two countries have contributed to the economic hardships that have befallen the Maine lumber, fishing and potato industries. In our country, particularly under the leadership of the Reagan administration, our course is one of free trade in the world market. But the Canadian government offers numerous assistance programs to its industry, creating unfair advantages for Canadian industry over that in border states, and particularly over small businesses in Maine and other states.

Canadian potato growers benefit from as many as 30 government-sponsored assistance programs in the form of grants, retroactive subsidized price mechanisms and sophisticated marketing and research tools. Taken together, these incentives provide Canadian growers with an estimated 40 to 50% advantage over their American counterparts.

In the lumber industry, the Canadian portion of the U. S. lumber market has grown from 18.7% in 1975 to a current 31.6%. In some instances, Canadian lumber sells at levels 12 times cheaper than U. S. lumber. The Canadian government owns lands on which their timber is harvested, and competitive sales practices have been eliminated in British Columbia. With the currency exchange rate between the two countries giving Canadians a 17 to 20% price advantage, the U. S. lumber industry is facing economic catastrophe.

Canadian fishermen also are the beneficiaries of government subsidies not enjoyed by U. S. concerns. The U. S. government took a positive tack toward alleviating the Canadian advantages in this industry by establishing a 200-mile protective boundary for our fishermen, but Mainers have invested more than $10 million in private funds to bolster the state's fishing industry. Additional corrective steps are needed, and Senator Cohen is to be commended for taking the lead on identifying possible remedies to these inequities.

Canada is our largest trading partner and a cherished friend. We must continue to seek fair and equitable solutions to these and other trade problems so that both of our economies will flourish.

EEOC Nominee: I recently wrote President Reagan and asked him to withdraw the name of William M. Bell as the nominee for chairman of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

EEOC, which functions to fight discrimination in employment, has a budget of $141.2 million and employs 3,300 individuals. The president's nominee, therefore, logically should be a person with a strong background in administration. But Bell, a Detroit man who is president and sole employee of an employment recruitment firm, hardly fits this description. His firm reportedly has placed no persons in jobs this year and he has never supervised more than four employees.

I do not doubt the nominee's sensitivity to the cause of civil rights, but this cannot compensate for his great lack of administrative credentials. In order to uphold our pledge in support of equal rights, the president should seek a more suitable candidate for the job.

Arms Elimination: President Reagan deserves high praise for his initiative to the Soviets for a joint elimination of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

The challenge delivered by the president to the Soviet Union cannot be dismissed by Soviet officials if their postures toward peace are to retain credibility among the people of the world. We can only hope that President Brezhnev is equally serious in his approach to our greatest worldwide problem.

Sent in by Eva Yates:

A nice cool Monday morning for a change. There were no good mornings all this past week but that is gone so we will enjoy today. Our sympathy goes out to an old neighbor and friend, Herman Cole, in the loss of his wife. Herman and I grew up together years ago. Friday, the 20th we got our first real snow here—it made you feel winter was closing in but here's hoping no more comes until after Christmas. The hunters are numerous but some are lucky and some just won't be eating venison. We took the Go-Shoes off the hook, warmed them up and went to Verna Swan's birthday party Sunday. So good to see and talk with friends I had not seen in 30 years or more. There were well over 100 guests and Verna flitted around like a bumblebee in a punkin patch. Although she will never be 75 again, she was a happy lady yesterday.

On Tuesday we had dinner guests Mrs. Hilda Taylor and Mrs. Alvin Yates and Karen of West Paris. It was nice, come again granddaughters.

Verna Swan called to see if we were home on Thursday. She was on her way to see Selma Chapman.

Russell Yates spent Monday evening at Gilbert Haines in West Bethel.

Traffic has been near steady both night and day on Sunday River all week.

Peggy Blake had Sunday dinner with mother and brother Joe on Sunday and attended the birthday party for Verna.

Not much news but hope all who read my foolish writings enjoy a wonderful Thanksgiving and no gas or heart burn afterwards. Happy feasting.

See you all later.

Monday, Nov. 16, the first and second graders went to the Bethel Library to celebrate Children's Book Week. Mrs. Virginia Keniston encouraged the children to try to write a book. These books would be displayed at the Library at Christmas time. Mrs. Sue Farrar and Mrs. Phyllis Dock, both local authors, told the children how to write a book. They said you must write what you see, what you feel and things you know about. Mrs. Farrar read a short story she had written about her grandson, Amos (Fox) and a dog named Abe. Amos is a first grader at E.B.S.

At the TAP meeting Tuesday evening, it was decided to hold an E.B.S. T-Shirt Sale on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 3 and 4 at the Bethel IGA Store. Now is the time to get those T-shirts for Christmas gifts.

It will be very popular so all racers are urged to register early so that they can be included. Both Gould Academy and Sunday River provide some of the finest facilities, conditions and terrain for competitive skiing and the program will emphasize a total, overall, balanced approach to all phases of ski racing, mental, physical and technical.

Walking With Jesus Christ

Thanksgiving—a national holiday—turkey is king and they're bigger and meatier than those of the Pilgrims—the year of 1621 when Thanksgiving was proclaimed as a day to give thanks to God for a bountiful harvest.

Turkey is king because it was from a land ruled by a Queen—Elizabeth I of England—that forced the Puritans to come to America where they might have religious freedom.

Yes, America the beautiful—land we love—but, has turkey as king replaced the Bible the Puritans loved so much?—Do worldly things, such as television have pre-eminence over God?—if so, then our future will reflect—"we are what we eat" and in a Biblical sense—"We'll get what we ask for."—"Do not be deceived: God cannot be mocked. A man (woman and child) reaps what he sows." Galatians 6:7. And we will add—and from what we see and hear, seeds are planted that tomorrow will bear fruit—very, often not so good.

It was also in the year about 1621 that John Bunyan was born in England—and later was called the "Prince of Dreamers"—so picturesquely described by those who read his book—"Pilgrim's Progress"—a book that describes a Christian as a Pilgrim on his way to the Celestial City—Heaven, John Bunyan, a man given to "pleasant talk" of the Scriptures had been brought to his senses when he heard several poor women speaking—"as if they found a new world."—for these women had found a new life "in Christ."

Bunyan's life henceforth was filled with a "burning and feverish enthusiasm" for God—and because of it was jailed—there he wrote the masterpiece—read second only to the Bible.

A man spent years in jail—the Puritans bore hardships for the sake of their beliefs and the Bible—yet today few read it—very few gather their families together as the Pilgrims did to give thanks to Almighty God. But, those that do—find rewards far beyond their fondest dreams—teaching their children—"so that they may have the full riches of complete understanding, in order that they may know the mystery of God, namely, Christ, in whom are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Colossians 2:2.

CARBON MONOXIDE POISONING IS DANGER OF WINTER DRIVING SEASON

Drowsiness caused by carbon monoxide poisoning is a danger of the approaching cold weather season, warn the Maine State Police.

"Carbon monoxide is a colorless, odorless poison that is capable of causing numbness, unconsciousness and death, when present in the air in even low concentration," said Colonel Allan H. Weeks, chief of the Maine State Police.

To avoid a sudden and undetectable weakening, disabling of the body by carbon monoxide poisoning that could quickly result in death, the state police advise motorists to always observe these precautions:

—When starting a car or truck in a garage, be sure the garage door is open before the engine is started.

—If the vehicle is suspected to have a leaky manifold, exhaust pipe or muffler, have it checked. Replace it, if necessary, to prevent a tragedy.

—Always have a window in the car or truck partially opened while driving.

—If you, as a motorist or a passenger, start to feel drowsy or sleepy while traveling, stop before it is too late.

Carbon monoxide is "extremely dangerous"; if the presence of this deadly gas is suspected, the state police urge motorists to open their vehicle windows and stop at the first station or garage for a complete check of the exhaust system.

Letters to the Editor

Nov. 20, 1981

The Labels for Education Program sponsored by the Campbell Soup Company has begun. The children of the Ethel Bisbee School will be collecting labels from now until Feb. 19, 1982.

Labels from any size Campbell soups, Chunky soups, all Campbell Bean products, all French-American products, Tomato Juice, V-8 Juice and Swanson Canned Products are acceptable. Only the FRONT of the label is needed. Each label is worth one cent.

Because of the delay in receiving the catalog, the items to be reserved for the Ethel Bisbee School have not been selected. As soon as the catalog arrives we will let you know what will be ordered.

Last year we collected 23,700 labels. We would like to set the goal at 20,000 for this year.

Yours truly,
Caroline V. Gould
Chairman for Ethel Bisbee

SOLAR FACTS

by Robert E. Lewis

The Trombe Wall

One of the most important developments in passive solar heating is the Trombe wall, an indirect-gain heating method developed for a house designed by Felix Trombe and Jacques Michel in Odiello, France, in 1967.

In designing the house, Trombe and Michel decided to use a new approach to storing solar energy and distributing it to the building's interior living area.

Up until this time, the most commonly used passive heating systems incorporated direct-gain methods, which often call for a room with south-facing glass exterior wall and heat-absorbing masonry for the room's floor and its back wall (i. e. the wall facing the exterior glass).

For the Trombe house, however, the two designers decided to place a 24-inch-thick masonry wall directly behind the double-glazed, south-facing exterior glass. This formed an air space of approximately three inches between the double-paneled glass and the thermal storage wall. In addition, vents with movable dampers were placed near the top and bottom of the masonry wall.

To absorb as much of the heat passing through the glass as possible, the wall was painted black on its exterior side. During the day, it was found that the sun often produced temperatures of 150 degrees Fahrenheit on the exterior surface of the masonry wall, and temperatures of 140 degrees Fahrenheit in the air between the glass and the wall. The heat absorbed by the masonry wall was

STATE POLICE ADVISE THOROUGH INSPECTIONS

The state police advise motorists to make sure when they take their motor vehicle to be inspected that it is done thoroughly for their own safety. "Motorists who by law are supposed to have their vehicles inspected by a State licensed motor vehicle inspection station should make sure that the items required by law to be inspected are indeed inspected," said Col. Allan H. Weeks, chief of the Maine State Police.

State Police Traffic Safety officers are making a maximum effort in cooperation with licensed station owners and certified mechanics to make sure vehicles are inspected as required, Col. Weeks said.

"Owners of vehicles should realize that the three dollar fee charged for the motor vehicle inspection does not cover the cost of any needed replacement materials or additional labor," said Col. Weeks.

The Maine motor vehicle inspection includes: brakes (including the emergency); steering mechanism and suspension system (including tires and wheels); exhaust system; lights (including head, tail, directional and rear plate lights, rear reflector and headlight aim), with a possible additional charge if the headlight aim has to be adjusted; rust (especially frame rust, along with body rust and protruding metal edges); and mirrors, horn, window glass and seat belts.

'DRINKING WATER & HEALTH' PAMPHLET PUBLISHED BY UNIVERSITY OF MAINE-ORONO

Levels of risks caused by a wide range of drinking water contaminants are described in an informational pamphlet, Drinking Water and Health, published by the Land and Water Resources Center at the University of Maine at Orono. The report concludes that "there is no way we can totally avoid some contamination of our drinking water." Whether the health benefits of changing treatment methods offsets costs and possible disadvantages of different methods must be decided by individuals and communities who need to balance acceptable risk with acceptable cost, the report says. Copies are available at the Division of Health Engineering, Maine Department of Human Services, Augusta, and at county offices of the UMO Cooperative Extension Service.

In and About Bethel

Mr. and Mrs. William Von Zint plan to leave Friday for their winter home in Largo, Fla.

Sidney "Butch" Dyke, Colorado Springs, Colo., is spending Thanksgiving week with his mother, Mrs. Verma Dyke, and his sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Clanton, Mark, Lisa and Keith.

conducted slowly through the wall and released into the adjacent living area by radiation at night when the heat was needed.

The vents at the top and bottom of the thermal wall were used to provide distribution of heat into the living room during the day. As the air between the exterior glass and the masonry wall is heated, it will rise naturally. As this heated air moves upwards, it flows through the vents at the top of the wall and into the adjacent living area.

At the same time, cooler air in the living area sinks to the floor, where it is drawn through the lower vents back to the air space between the exterior glass and the masonry wall. Once this cooler air is returned, it is heated again, and the cycle repeats itself.

This natural looping motion of heated air is generally effective for heating until two or three hours after sunset. At night, the vents are closed.

Studies of the Trombe house in France show that approximately 70% of the home's heating requirements are met with solar energy.

A distinct advantage of this system as compared to direct-gain methods is that except for the southern masonry wall normal light frame construction can be used. Concrete or masonry floors and walls are not needed. Also, sunlight does not have to shine directly into living spaces, so there are no problems of fading of furniture and other interior materials.

Because of the effectiveness of the design, Trombe walls are now found in solar houses around the world, including the United States.

To learn more about Trombe walls, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Robert E. Lewis (#11-A) P. O. Box 3680, Grand Central Station, New York, N. Y. 10017.

UMO HAS ONLY SCIENTIST IN U. S. WORKING ON OCEAN ASPECTS OF EEL MIGRATION

Dr. James McCleave, University of Maine at Orono zoologist, is the only scientist in the United States working on the ocean aspects of eel migration. He is funded in this study by grants from the National Science Foundation and the National Geographic Society. Among the conclusions reached by McCleave and his assistants in the study is that eels sense the end of their journey from North America's fresh water streams and lakes to the spawning grounds in the Atlantic's Sargasso Sea because of the three to four degree rise in the temperature of the water.

REP. SNOWE BACKS BILL FOR RURAL ENTERPRISE ZONES

In an attempt to address the problems faced by underdeveloped areas, U. S. Rep. Olympia J. Snowe (R-Maine) has co-sponsored legislation in the House to establish rural enterprise zones in economically depressed communities.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Wes Watkins (D-Okla.), would designate 25 rural enterprise zones in the first year and 10 additional zones in each subsequent year. The zones would be designed to alleviate rural economic stress by establishing tax incentives for small businesses and agribusiness.

"The majority of Mainers live in rural areas that have been particularly hard hit by our economic troubles of recent years," Mrs. Snowe said. "Many areas of the state stand to benefit from passage of this bill through the strengthening and preservation of small businesses, creation of new jobs and stabilizing of local tax bases."

Rural enterprise zones would be commissioned for 10 years under guidelines addressing population, per capita income and unemployment levels. The program will provide benefits such as grants for public works projects, direct loans and loan guarantees to new and expanding businesses and loans of up to 75% for the development of vocational education and agricultural extension centers. Technical assistance grants to Tax reductions and credits, such as exclusion of rural enterprise zone investors from capital gains taxes, would accompany the program of grants, loans and assistance. The program would be administered on the federal level by the Farmers Home Administration.

"Congress has given much attention recently to the concept of urban enterprise zones to solve the financial problems of our cities, but rural areas have been largely ignored," Mrs. Snowe said. "Given our current economic climate in Maine, this legislation could provide a major incentive for rural areas to help themselves to regain solid footing."

RUMFORD YOUTH MAJORING IN JOURNALISM AT UMO DESPITE HANDICAP

Today, Robert McPhee is a University of Maine at Orono sophomore battling the odds to carve out a career for himself as a journalist, although confined to a wheelchair and having great difficulty in speaking.

But back in 1976 Robert McPhee was a senior and all-around athlete at Rumford High School, looking forward to a career in law enforcement. That was before an incident on the football field in September of that year changed his life forever.

Playing defensive halfback in a scrimmage against Portland High McPhee tackled a fullback and half an hour later became dizzy and was unable to walk.

Doctors would later diagnose that McPhee had suffered a brain stem hemorrhage in the aftermath of that tackle. The brain stem is that portion of the brain which controls normal muscle tone. As a result of the hemorrhage McPhee was left immobile due to severe tightness in his muscle tone and unable to speak clearly.

Instead of training in law enforcement for a berth on the state police force, McPhee spent the next two and one half years receiving physical, occupational and speech therapy at various hospitals throughout Maine and New England.

McPhee when told in the wake of the injury that he would never play sports again was bitterly disappointed. But that disappointment

WIND POWER THE FOCUS OF O.E.R. PROGRAM

The feasibility of harnessing the wind as a future power source for Maine is the thrust of a new program being launched by the Maine Office of Energy Resources. Any Maine resident is eligible to participate in the O.E.R.'s new Anemometer Loan Program.

The O.E.R. feels the benefits of the program will be two-fold. First, a small number of Maine residents will be provided a low-cost means of monitoring wind speed at their potential sites. Second, the current wind data for Maine will be significantly improved by providing wind speed information for areas of the state.

Under the program, those applicants selected must be willing to record wind data on a daily basis at their site and to relay that information to the O.E.R.

The O. E. R. has five anemometer systems to be provided on a loan basis to those interested in participating. Those applicants selected for the program must agree to properly install and maintain the equipment during the time it is loaned to them. Applicants not selected initially will be placed on a waiting list and may participate in the program as the anemometers become available.

The anemometers will be sited throughout Maine in areas where little or no wind data currently exists. The O.E.R. will make the determination on the feasibility of an applicant's site. Applications for the Anemometer Loan Program are available now from the O.E.R.

For more information write the O.E.R., State House Station #53, Augusta, Maine 04333 or call 289-3811.

The Week in Washington

by Sen. George J. Mitchell

Arms Control

A number of events, such as the increased defense budget, the proposal to use nuclear waste from civilian plants for weapons production, and the President's recent proposal to decrease nuclear arms stationed in Europe, have all concentrated public attention on the question of nuclear power - both weaponry and generating power.

The 1950's began a time when the awesome power of nuclear explosives was in the hands of our nation, our allies and our potential adversaries. That decade saw a series of marches, sit-ins, and other demonstrations to "ban the bomb." Some who participated may have been naive about the innocence of Soviet arms buildups. But all were concerned about the implications of mankind's control of the power to eradicate human life and poison the earth's atmosphere for centuries into the future.

By the end of that decade and throughout the 1960's we successfully began and concluded several treaty efforts to control the arms race and to move towards the safe use of nuclear power for peaceful purposes.

The Test Ban Treaty was signed in 1963, and both our nation and the Soviet Union have exploded no nuclear warheads in the atmosphere since then. The Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty was signed, and under its terms, both nations have sought to impose international safeguards on nuclear power facilities and to prevent the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel from these civilian plants into weapons-grade fuel.

The 1971 SALT I treaty was a further effort to get the arms race under control. It effectively banned the building of anti-ballistic missile systems by our country and by the Soviet Union. That ban was designed to make sure that both nations would remain vulnerable to a nuclear strike, thus forcing both nations to avoid such a strike.

President Reagan's proposal to the Soviet Union to reduce nuclear arms in Europe is a welcome return to arms control negotiations. The events of the past several years have amply demonstrated that Soviet pretensions of peaceful intent are open to serious challenge. Peace loving nations do not invade other countries and they do not wage proxy wars, as the Soviet Union is now doing in Afghanistan and Cambodia. Peaceful rhetoric is simply not enough, especially when it is accompanied by belligerent actions. Such action must be met firmly.

Our nation is now preparing to do just that. It is necessary to improve our readiness and to strengthen our strategy of deterrence.

But that buildup ought to be accompanied by realistic and meaningful negotiations with the Soviet Union to halt the arms race, to reduce especially those arms deployments which could trigger a confrontation and to seek alternative ways of reconciling international conflicts.

In the long term we are seeking a world in which threats and counterthreats will not be the currency of exchange between nations. To reach such a goal, we have to be flexible and strong enough to use all the bargaining power at our command intelligently and imaginatively.

I welcome President Reagan's efforts to resume arms control negotiations. They are essential to our own security.

Unless and until responsible and verifiable arms control agreements are reached, there will continue to be more and more powerful weapons of destruction. That is not a legacy we want to leave the next generation.

Greenwood City

— Mrs. Collette Morgan, Corres. —
I haven't traveled the rough and hilly places for two weeks but I have noticed the many changes in November.

The frost this morning spread itself like diamonds on the land, even coming onto my porch and making lovely pictures on the windows. Over each pane, where he breathed or stepped, there were flowers, trees, beaks of birds, and swarms of bees. These were all pictured in silver sheen.

November is mist and mystery and when time plays the year's recession I think the forest with a pageant of beauty, wears now a thread of sadness woven through the land.

But Nature sets time for all things. Each season is a brimming cup running over with its particular joys and pleasures. We have the green of spring, summer's growth, color of autumn, tinges of winter, when ice sharpened winds have bitten closely into the bark of trees. They stand through nights of loneliness. Yet come dawn these tall trees stand against the winter sky, still proudly beautiful and an inspiration to all who pass. They wait for the beauty of spring's coming when again rich garlands will twine their hair.

November's interest leads you from one corridor to another; one interest to another, or one discovery to another.

The first of the week the pond was incased with ice. Today its waves roll in the wind. On some days the temperature rises and the dawns are clear and mild, and the tranquil skies look down. Yet by evening there is a change; a chill in the air. So soon the warm drifting day is over.

Each season is gladdened with riches so it is wise that Nature limns them. She also has those in-between times which signal the end of one season while we anticipate another.

This coming week we gather for a festive time, to wish each other cheers and give thanks for the blessings of wonderful past years.

A Happy Thanksgiving to everyone.

TRANSPORTATION SYMPOSIUM TO BE HELD IN AUGUSTA

FRIDAY, DEC. 4

"Transportation Economics for the 80's" will be analyzed at the Maine Transportation Conference Dec. 4 at the Augusta Civic Center where state and federal officials and engineers, construction experts and UMO engineering students will meet for the 32nd annual symposium.

The Maine Department of Transportation, Maine section of American Society of Civil Engineers and the University of Maine at Orono are sponsoring the day-long examination of transportation problems and solutions, says MDOT Commissioner George N. Campbell, Jr. He will deliver the keynote address on "Challenges Facing the Maine Department of Transportation in the 80's."

Professor George Greenwood of UMO's civil engineering department will preside over the morning sessions, Dean James L. Clapp will extend the official welcome.

William D. Richardson Jr., Federal Highway Administration chief for Maine, will discuss "The Federal Perspective."

Other MDOT speakers are Chief Engineer Richard A. Coleman, Policy Analysis Director Walter J. Verrill and Engineer of Design William D. Harris.

William F. Fernald, chief of MDOT's bureau of transportation services, will lead an afternoon symposium on other travel modes. Also speaking will be Bradley L. Peters, Maine Central Railroad vice president; Lee Gray, Maine Pilots Association president; and Brian N. Chermack, Southern Maine Regional Planning Commission executive director.

Municipal problems will be discussed by John Melrose of Mallar Development Services, Inc., and Captain Arthur D. Hall, selectman of Bremen.

The Contractor's Viewpoint will be presented by Ival R. Cianchette board chairman of Cianbro Corporation, during the afternoon session moderated by Alden G. Small, director of MDOT's bureau of maintenance and operations.

John A. Clements, president of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO) and commissioner of New Hampshire's Department of Public Works and Highways, will head up the dinner speakers, under the chairmanship of Dale Jellison, Maine section president, American Society of Civil Engineers.

George D. DiMatteo, president of Associated General Contractors of Maine, will present awards for prize-winning papers by UMO en-

While Robbie Harrington was home, he aided in the recruitment of his brother, Tom Harrington, in the delayed entry program. Tom will leave July 7 for basics and AIT at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., after which he will be sent to Germany.

On Oct. 28 last year Robbie left for the service and on the anniversary of that date, Tom was sworn in and Robbie received confirmation from Texas that he will be transferred to Germany next June.

Thursday afternoon, Robbie met Ray Harrington, who was on a business trip in Connecticut and they drove to Texas spending a day or so with Ray's classmate, Bruce Morton in Austin. Then Robbie returned to Fort Hood and Ray flew back to Connecticut on Monday.

Janice Harrington's parents, Alfred and Cora Johnson, South Paris, visited her, Tom and Patrick, Sunday.

Earl Colby was in Lewiston, Tuesday.

Engineering students, Gary Hauss, president of the ASCE student chapter at UMO, will present awards in the model bridge contest. In that, students and graduate engineers submit 18-inch-long spans of oaktag and glue. A pressure machine then measures pounds of stress until breakage occurs. Previous years' entries have withstood up to 681 pounds, says Donovan G. Lajoie and Albert L. Godfrey Jr., MDOT engineers organizing the conference.

William J. Langford, Maine Good Roads Association president, will present the Max L. Wilder Memorial Award for the day's outstanding speaker. Commissioner Campbell will present a 25-year, AASHTO-sponsored pin to Melvin W. Morgan of Bangor, an MDOT soils engineer.

Olivia Davis, Corres.

We re-call your attention to the Willing Workers display of the line of fashions at the home of Marta Clements from Nov. 21 to Nov. 30. Remember, the proceeds from this sale will be to repair the Union Church building at South Woodstock. Come and order something for your self or for a friend or a Christmas gift. This will help you as well as the Willing Workers project. The merchandise will be back in time for Christmas.

Deer seem scarce in this area. Shirley Koskela and Perry Ryerson are the only two I've heard about in this section.

Olivia Davis and Kay Billings attended the Grange at Bryant Pond Monday night.

No news is good news and I'm beginning to believe it after listening to all the murders on news line so I haven't much.

I will say I had a nice letter from Esther Davis who arrived in Florida on Monday. She, with her guest, stayed with her daughter, Lorraine Nowlin overnight and they landed in Orlando the next day. She had let her house this summer and had several things missing she discovered. When taking Carol Stowell back to the air station they saw the Columbia in the air and she said they took pictures of it. Barbara Cash is staying with Esther this winter. Carol drove Esther's car down and flew back later in the week.

We have had a miserable week of rain and more rain but the temperature has been warm. On Thursday the sun tried to shine. Promises of snow have made me go to Norway to have snow treads put on the truck today. More rain over Sunday is predicted and colder tonight.

That's all from here this time.

The children and staff at the Center wish everyone a very Happy Thanksgiving!

At circle time this week they talked about the first Thanksgiving and the children made hand turkeys and helped to make fresh cranberry sauces.

Next week activities will be centered around the theme of "Families." They hope to make a big photo collage of Center families—children and staff, too!

The parent group will be having a Christmas Craft and Bake Sale on Friday, Dec. 4, at the Bethel Savings Bank. Come help support the Children's Center!

MATH AUCTION AT WOODSTOCK ELEM. SCHOOL

The students at Woodstock Elementary School, grade 3-6, earned "Big Bucks" by achieving various math skills. This money was used on Friday, Nov. 20, to buy toys, games, puzzles, and records at the school's auction. The typewriter went for $100,000. Dr. Wayne Gersen, Superintendent of S.A.D. 44, was the auctioneer.

Each student has worked accumulating money through his/her work in math. An "A" on a test earned $200,000 and a "C" earned $100,000. A student who was prepared for class every day earned $5,000; having homework complete the entire time was worth $10,000; $50,000 was earned for learning the addition, subtraction, multiplication and division tables, and a student earned $100,000 bonus for each math game made up complete with board, questions, answers and tokens.

The other part was the work of the auction committee gathering over 300 items to be auctioned off. Most of the students cleaned out their own closets, bringing in toys and games they no longer wanted.

The richest person in school was Missy Johnson. Missy earned $500,000. Just imagine having 1/2 million dollars to spend at one auction.

Congratulations to Missy and to all of the students for working so hard on this project.

W.W. I-BARRACKS & AUXILIARY TO MEET WEDNESDAY, DEC. 2

World War I Barracks and Auxiliary #2943 will hold their regular meeting Wednesday, Dec. 2. An exchange of gifts and a party will follow the meeting and each one attending is to bring a gift, marked plainly for a man or woman. The group will recess for the next three months, with the next meeting on April 7, 1982.

Nov. 29, it will be "Family Sunday." Sunday, Dec. 6, the Junior Class will begin the Advent season by lighting the first candle on the wreath. Just a reminder, please return your pledge cards before Nov. 30 or contact Thelma Clark if you did not receive one. If you are interested in joining the Christmas Choir, please contact Leatrice Mystrall or plan on attending all Thursday night rehearsals on Dec. 3-10-17 at 7:30. All voices are greatly needed.

Hunting season is over on our road and have only heard of two deer being tagged. One, Ricky Angevine the first day and the other by someone staying at a camp on the road. This last week has been a wet week. Thursday it did half clear off and with the wind blowing could bring in the clothes to get them dry. Friday morning I started in to town and ran into hail, snow and whatever. This kept up more or less all day but we did not have a very appreciable amount of the white stuff. Saturday was another miserable day and after the wet week before it did make the back roads muddy and is some cases inaccessible Saturday for hunting. Sunday Frank I went down to the folks for dinner and lunch. While there, my brother, Danny, Shirli, and Jacob, drove in. Jacob was having a not feeling-too-well time which a lot of people have said they were having.

This is Thanksgiving week and even though a lot is being said about our government we should be thankful we can still say openly what we feel.

Can't say that I like these short days but one tends to stay in the house more and get more inside work done.

Imagine that there will be a lot of cooking this week and housecleaning by people who are expecting visitors. Unless I hear differently we are going to be here with just three. Hope we have more for Christmas.

Tuesday, Nov. 17, Evelyn Hilborn had a roast beef dinner out with friends. Nov. 18, Albertina Angevine, Judy Coolidge and girls went to Gorham, N. H., shopping and ate out. Nov. 19, Evelyn had a hunters' breakfast out with friends. Friday, I stopped in to see Evelyn on the way home from the village and Sunday Evelyn and a friend went to Norway and to Turner for lunch.

I did get, on calling, that Howard Chapman was also a lucky hunter Nov. 16.

Bradley and Fern Benson of Poland had Sunday dinner with his folks, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Benson.

Andy Smith spent Saturday night on Grover Hill with his brother and wife, Doug and Didi.

Dr. Leonard Shaw left Thursday to Sunday for New York. This was for his nephew Matthew Coan's birthday. He stayed with his sister and husband, Mimi and Miles Coan.

Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy went to Sebago to visit their son, Dean, and family.

from our area were Mr. and Mrs. Bob Stearns, Debbie Seames and children. Chuckie Mason and family. Saturday was also Rusty Seames' first birthday and his mother took a panda bear cake to the supper and it was also Kallie Mason's birthday and someone brought a cake for her.

Monday has been another open and shut day. We had quite a little snow after dinner but don't think that it piled up.

Such Was Our Day

Pale and reluctant, the sun rose early. Parted the clouds banked around. Peered at the earth and stretched out a finger. To touch the frost on the ground. Then he remembered that Thanksgiving Day.

Was a red-letter day to unfold. He brightened with pleasure beamed at the world. And painted the sky pink and gold.

Here on the farm our breakfast was over. Before we greeted the sun. Mother and Grandmother rallied their helpers.

They had tasks for everyone. While Grandfather went to gather eggs.

Father and I carried wood. Enough to keep stoking the black kitchen range. That many such feasts had withstood.

The racks in the oven, could hold a half dozen. Large mince and pumpkin pies; When the pies came out, in went the turkey.

Before our admiring eyes. We used our best dishes, and the table was set. For ourselves and our company. Soon they arrived and our joy was complete.

As we welcomed them heartily. Dinner was ready at last and we sat. For a moment of silence and grace.

The turkey was carved, every plate was filled. And happiness shone on each face.

Sunset came early, but our minds and our hearts. Where serene as the evening closed in.

Such was our day... a Thanksgiving Day. To recall and live over again.

NO DECISION MADE ON TYLER ROAD PETITION

A public hearing on a petition seeking to close the Tyler Road in Mason attracted about 70 people to the Oxford County Commissioners Office in South Paris on Tuesday, Nov. 17.

The Tyler Road leads to a swimming hole long frequented by residents and visitors to the area alike. The petitioners said that they did not wish to stop public use of the swimming hole, but desire to seek "peace and quiet" on their property, and to that end wanted the last few hundred feet closed to the public.

Bethel attorney Gordon Gillies, representing those opposed to the closing of the road, presented witnesses who testified in opposition to the petition.

Several present wondered what would happen if the road was closed, reverting the land to property owners who might decide to sell it. They questioned whether new owners could prevent access to the swimming hole.

No decision was made immediately by the Commissioners on the issue. A visit to the location by the Board was to be made before a resolution of the petition is made.

GOSPEL CENTER PRESENTS "RIDE THE WIND" SUNDAY EVENING, NOV. 29

Family life with meaning is the subject of the Heartland film release, "Ride the Wind." Heartland Productions, Inc., of Des Moines, Iowa, has put on film a fast moving kind of "our gang" story that will delight young and old with every thing from a serious father-son talk to the wild and hilarious back yard mud fight.

Heartland's president, Russell Doughton Jr., producer-director for "Ride the Wind" had as his goal a "family flight into faith." The "flight" is initiated in this story by two eleven year old boys who find themselves in competitive combat building "model" airplanes for a race down a steep hill (with each at the controls). As the competition develops they involve their friends and families in a warm uproarious entanglement where the saving power of Jesus Christ is clearly seen as the source of eternal life and "walking in Him" as the basis of our work, play and personal friendships.

Families in this area will have an opportunity for a personal "flight into faith" when "Ride the Wind" is shown at The Bethel Gospel Center on Route 26, Bethel, on Sunday evening, Nov. 29, at 6 p.m.

Everyone is cordially invited. No admission is charged, however, a free-will offering will be taken. For additional information—please call—824-2289.

SEN. WILLIAM COHEN From Washington

Maine brought a message to Washington last week. The message was simple — competition from subsidized industries in Canada threatens the existence of several industries vital to Maine's economy.

A Senate subcommittee which I chair held a hearing last week to examine several aspects of U. S. Canadian trade which affect not only Maine but most states which border Canada. Four witnesses from Maine testified at the hearing, all of whom made thoughtful and effective presentations in behalf of their respective industries.

The hearing offered an excellent example of how people can influence the actions and policies of the government. For more than five hours, the witnesses from the affected industries and a panel representing several government agencies discussed the problems which subsidized Canadian industries present. All the government witnesses acknowledged that they had learned a great deal from listening to the Maine witnesses — people who are actually affected by the policies the government follows.

With a host of assistance programs sponsored by the Canadian government and its provinces at their disposal, Canadian industries have been able to expand production capabilities, reduce production costs and increase exports at prices that simply cannot be matched by American industries.

For this hearing I chose to focus on four affected industries: fishing, potatoes, wood products and maple syrup.

Edward F. Bradley of Portland representing the Maine Fishermen's Cooperative Association and James Salisbury of Milbridge, a fisherman and member of the New England Regional Fisheries Management Council, pointed out that unlike their Canadian competitors, New England fishermen must develop their industry in the face of indifference, and at times, outright interference from the policies of our government.

"The independent harvester and small processor must attempt in the shadow of a government which does not consider the development of the industry a primary economic or social goal," Bradley told the hearing. "The Commerce Department seems more concerned about fish stocks and their well-being than fishermen and their needs. The State Department seems less concerned about the industry and appears more sensitive to Canadian goals and objectives than those of the New England economy."

Dorothy Kelley of the Maine Potato Council in Presque Isle and Stanley Greaves of the Maine Potato Growers Association, also of Presque Isle, testified before the hearing on the problems of the potato industry.

Mrs. Kelley told the hearing that she has spent six years unsuccessfully seeking government relief to help neutralize the negative effects of Canada's increased potato exports to the U. S.

The process of obtaining assistance "is cumbersome and perplexing for an individual who has no legal background and represents a small agricultural industry," she said. The Maine potato industry can expect to pay between $100,000 and $200,000 in legal fees alone in an attempt to offset the unfair advantages enjoyed by Canadian potato growers.

I share the view that federal trade officials have offered a minimum of cooperation to small industries, both in trade negotiations and the administration of trade remedies. Although remedies may exist on the books, they remain just "paper promises" if they are affordable, are too complex to understand, or are ignored by federal agencies.

One of the most encouraging results of the hearing was a pledge by the agencies to meet with industry representatives to resolve the obstacles blocking competitive trade.

I look forward to improved guidance and cooperation by our government in helping small industries counterbalance the effects of Canadian subsidies. The agencies have also agreed to increase their data base on Canadian export prices and subsidies, and to make this important information more accessible to those in industry.

Supporting our small industries by administering trade remedies in a straight forward, comprehensible and evenhanded fashion will have another benefit that should not be overlooked. If the U. S. adequately protects its own interests it will eliminate frictions with Canada before they become political time bombs—and will ensure the maintenance of harmony that has characterized the history of our two nations.
